Due Date:
Point Value: Max. 80 points
(Development – 50 points and Peer Review – 30 points)

Learning Objectives

You will

- Establish a teaching, social, and cognitive presence within your course.
- Design an effective and engaging introductory activity.
- Develop summative and formative assessments and activities that accurately measure student performance aligned with the intended learning objectives.
- Design checklists and rubrics that clearly describe how student performance will be assessed.

Directions

1. Start by watching the 5 icebreakers for online classes' video to get idea about introductory activity for your course. Feel free to browse online outside of the course for additional ideas and examples.
2. Then, choose any of the Assignment Sheet template from the folder provided in Module 4 this week. If you are not sure about which one to choose you can use the Indiana State University Assignment Template. Use a template to draft your icebreaker assignment.
3. Also, review the resources on Rubrics. After you have the idea of creating your rubric for the introductory activity, go to the Assignment Sheet.
4. Additionally, there is an Educational Tools resources that might be helpful for you to incorporate in your introductory activity or for future references.
5. Write the learning objectives and the needed instructions with directions for your introductory activity. Remember to have a clear instructions about how exactly you want your students to accomplish the task of the introductory activity.
6. Create your assessment and rubric/checklist for the introductory activity.
7. Be sure to compile/link necessary tools, tutorials, or supplementary materials that students will need.
8. After completing all the sections of the Assessment Sheet submit the file in the Module 4 Discussion.
9. Finally, evaluate your peers' work and give a constructive feedback to at least 2 peers.

Reply to your Peers

Reply to several peers in written or video format within the same discussion forum (at least 2 peers). Write or record about a paragraph (6-8 sentences) as a response. Bring additional ideas to the table, share experiences, advice, resources, or new viewpoints as a feedback. Be sure to follow the rules of etiquette as outlined in the Syllabus when responding to your peers.
